

FIRE PROTECTION STARTS AT YOUR HOME'S ROOF

Your roof is one of the most at-risk parts of your home in the event of wildfires. Helping protect your home and family by providing Class A fire-resistant roofing solutions is our top priority.

It has been proven that by roofing with Unified Steel™ Stone Coated Roofing, Newpoint™ Concrete Roof Tiles, US Tile® Clay Roofing Products or DaVinci® Roofscapes in conjunction with our components line, the roofing system will provide the highest level of fire protection available.

WHAT DOES CLASS A FIRE RESISTANCE MEAN?

- Provides effective protection against fire exposure
- Helps reduce the spread of fire
- Follows building codes and insurance requirements
- Withstands high winds to help prevent uplift
- Resists ember entry under the roof deck
- Protects after repeated exposures to flame

GUIDELINES TO KEEP YOUR HOME SAFER

Your roof's large surface area may seem vulnerable to extreme weather. However, roofs built with a Class A rating are engineered to be your first line of defense against all elements, including fire. Make sure to follow these guidelines to help protect your home from wildfires.

- Install a roofing system that is Class A fire-resistant, offering the highest resistance to fire available.
- Install or reroof with a system that withstands high winds and meets Wildland Urban Interface (WUI) requirements.
- Follow the correct guidelines for defensible space and maintenance on your roof and around your home.
